

Copying a picture from a web page

There may be occasions when you would like to download a picture from the web for a variety of reasons. This is how to do it.

Simply as an exercise, let us say that you want to copy a picture of Venice to attach to an email or insert in your 'blog'. (A blog is simply a Web diary.)

1. Go to the Google site www.google.com and search for Venice. You will immediately be presented with a load of web pages referring to the Italian city but this is not what we want – we want a picture.

A screenshot of a Google search page for the word 'venice'. The search bar contains 'venice' and the 'Search' button is visible. Below the search bar, the 'Web' tab is selected, showing a list of search results. The first result is 'Venice' from lastminute.com, followed by 'Hilton Venice Hotel' from Hilton.co.uk. A map of Venice is displayed, showing the city and surrounding areas. Below the map, there are more search results, including 'Venice VE Italy' from maps.google.co.uk, 'Venice - Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia', 'Venice Travel Guide and Travel Information - Lonely Planet', and 'VeNETia - The Web Site of Venice Italy Guide - Venise - Venedig'. An arrow points to the 'Images' tab in the top navigation bar.

2. So click on Images instead of Web and a vast array of potential image thumbnails will appear.

- It is probably a good idea to select Large Pictures from the dropdown menu at this point.
- Navigate your way to a suitable picture and double click on the thumbnail. This will open the small image in a new page.
